

Example of a forest plot

In this example of a forest plot, five studies are represented. Each square represents an individual study finding; the horizontal lines indicate the confidence interval (CI); the vertical line is the line of no effect or no difference; and the diamond represents the overall statistic across the five studies.

